Ms. B's

PLACE OF UNDERSTANDING

MOONLIGHT DREAMS

LISTENING TO Your Dreams

A Gentle Reflection for Understanding What Your Dreams May Be Showing You

Dreams do not always arrive with clear explanations. Sometimes they leave behind an image, a feeling, a person, a place, or a moment that stays with us long after we wake.

Rather than beginning by asking "What does this dream mean?", begin by becoming curious about your experience of the dream.

There is no need to rush toward an answer. Let the dream speak in your own language.

COMPLIMENTARY REFLECTION

YOUR LIFE IS THE CLASSROOM.
UNDERSTANDING IS THE BRIDGE. BECOMING IS THE PATH.

Ms. B's

PLACE OF UNDERSTANDING

MOONLIGHT DREAMS · WHISPERS TO THE MOON

A Note From Ms. B.

CREATING A DREAM PRACTICE

Dreams can be easy to lose.

Sometimes we wake with an entire story still alive within us, only to find that a few minutes later, pieces of it have already begun to disappear.

Creating a simple dream practice gives you a way to meet your dreams with a little more intention.

Before you go to sleep, take a quiet moment to turn your attention inward.

You might set a simple intention such as:

I am open to remembering what comes through my dreams tonight.

Or perhaps there is something happening in your life that you would like to hold gently in your awareness as you sleep.

You do not have to demand an answer. Simply become curious.

Come sit with me. You belong here.

Creating a Dream Practice

A NOTE FROM MS. B. · CONTINUED

When you wake from a dream, try not to move too quickly into your day. If you can, remain still for a moment. Notice what is still with you.

A feeling. A face. A place. A conversation. A color. A strange little detail that doesn't make sense yet.

Then record what you remember as soon as you can. Keep your dream journal beside your bed, use the notes or voice recorder on your phone, or choose whatever makes it easiest for you to capture the dream before it fades.

Don't worry about making it sound beautiful or putting it in the right order. Just catch the pieces.

You can return later to explore them more deeply. And remember: you do not have to understand every dream immediately.

Some dreams make sense the moment we wake. Others reveal themselves slowly, after another experience, another realization, or another dream gives us one more piece of the story.

Not every dream needs to carry a deeper message. Your job isn't to force the meaning.

Your practice is simply to notice, remember, record, and remain curious.

With love, Ms. B.

Ms. B's

PLACE OF UNDERSTANDING

MOONLIGHT DREAMS · WHISPERS TO THE MOON

Begin With What You Remember

01 · REMEMBER

Before trying to interpret anything, simply return to the dream.

What happened? Write down whatever you remember, even if it feels incomplete, strange, or out of order.

What details stood out most to you? People, places, colors, animals, objects, words, actions, sounds, or moments:

What image, feeling or moment stayed with you after you woke up?

Come sit with me. You belong here.

Ms. B's

PLACE OF UNDERSTANDING

MOONLIGHT DREAMS · WHISPERS TO THE MOON

Feel First, Interpret Later

02 · FEEL

Before asking what the dream means, notice how it felt.

What were you feeling during the dream?

How did you feel when you woke up?

Come sit with me. You belong here.

Feel First, Interpret Later

02 · FEEL · CONTINUED

Did you notice the feeling anywhere in your body?

Does this feeling remind you of anything happening in your waking life right now?

Ms. B's

PLACE OF UNDERSTANDING

MOONLIGHT DREAMS · WHISPERS TO THE MOON

Discover Your Personal Language of Symbols

03 · EXPLORE SYMBOLS

Dream symbols do not have to mean the same thing for everyone. Before searching for an outside interpretation, ask yourself what the symbol means to you.

Choose one person, object, place, animal, color, or other detail that stood out. The symbol or image:

What does it immediately make you think of?

Come sit with me. You belong here.

Discover Your Personal Language of Symbols

03 · EXPLORE SYMBOLS · CONTINUED

What memories, feelings, experiences, or associations do you have with it?

What might it represent in your life right now?

Ms. B's

PLACE OF UNDERSTANDING

MOONLIGHT DREAMS · WHISPERS TO THE MOON

Meet the Parts of Yourself

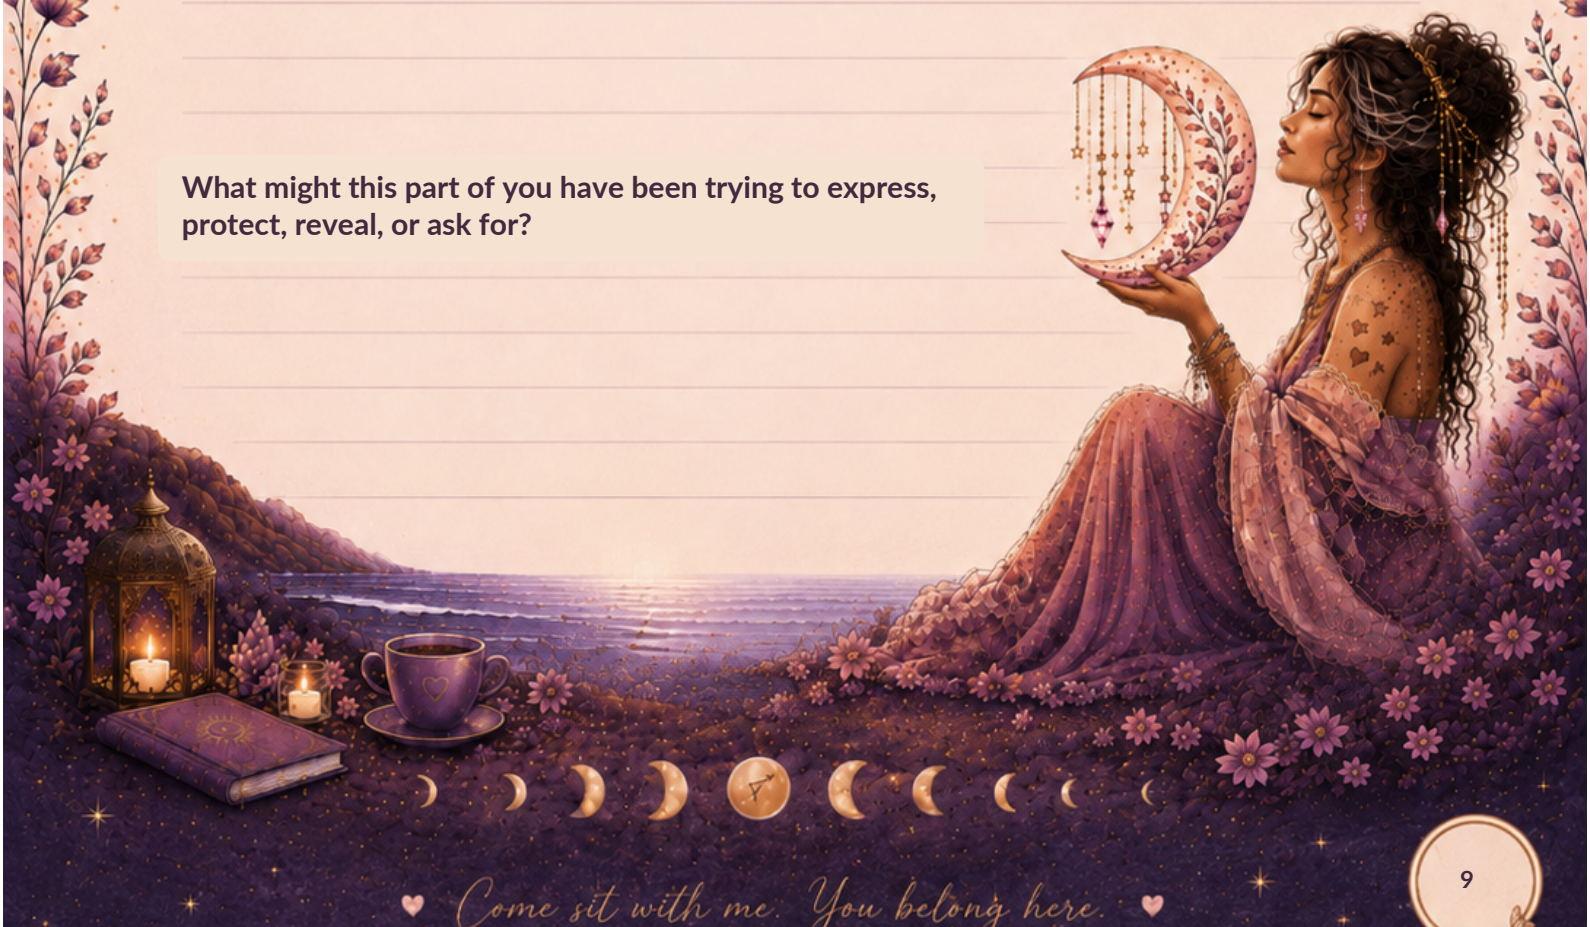
04 · DISCOVER

Sometimes the people or characters in a dream may reflect something within us: a feeling, need, fear, strength, wound, desire, or part of ourselves asking to be noticed.

Choose someone or something from your dream that feels significant. What qualities did they seem to carry?

Do any of those qualities live within you?

What might this part of you have been trying to express, protect, reveal, or ask for?



Come sit with me. You belong here.

Notice What May Be Repeating

05 · RECOGNIZE PATTERNS

Dreams sometimes bring our attention to something we have encountered before.

Have you dreamed about this person, place, feeling, situation, or symbol before?

Does anything in this dream resemble a pattern or dynamic in your waking life, even if it is something that you experienced in the past that may or may not be resolved?

Notice What May Be Repeating

05 · RECOGNIZE PATTERNS · CONTINUED

Where have you felt something like this before?

Is there anything you may be ready to see differently now?

Ms. B's

PLACE OF UNDERSTANDING

MOONLIGHT DREAMS · WHISPERS TO THE MOON

Listen for the Invitation

06 · UNDERSTAND

Rather than asking the dream to predict what will happen, consider what it may be inviting you to notice or understand.

What area of your life does this dream seem to be touching?

Is there something here you may need to acknowledge, feel, grieve, protect, release, reconsider, or understand more deeply?

Come sit with me. You belong here.

Ms. B's

PLACE OF UNDERSTANDING

MOONLIGHT DREAMS · WHISPERS TO THE MOON

Listen for the Invitation

06 · UNDERSTAND · CONTINUED

What truth feels close to the surface?

What possibility, desire, gift or part of myself might this dream be inviting me to explore? (Optional)

Come sit with me. You belong here.

Ms. B's

PLACE OF UNDERSTANDING

MOONLIGHT DREAMS · WHISPERS TO THE MOON

Have a Conversation with the Dream

07 · IMAGINE

Imagine for a moment that the dream could answer you. Ask it:

Why did you come to me?

What are you trying to help me understand?

Come sit with me. You belong here.

Have a Conversation with the Dream

07 · IMAGINE · CONTINUED

Write whatever comes without worrying whether it is "right."

What do you need me to notice?

What do you want me to remember?

Come sit with me. You belong here.

Ms. B's

PLACE OF UNDERSTANDING

MOONLIGHT DREAMS · WHISPERS TO THE MOON

From Understanding to Becoming

CLOSING REFLECTION

You do not have to solve the entire dream. Sometimes understanding is simply recognizing something you could not see before.

What do you understand now that you didn't before?

What feels different now that you can see this?

Come sit with me. You belong here.

Ms. B's

PLACE OF UNDERSTANDING

MOONLIGHT DREAMS · WHISPERS TO THE MOON

From Understanding to Becoming

CLOSING REFLECTION · CONTINUED

Is there one gentle choice or action that feels aligned with this understanding?

And finally… Perhaps this dream came to remind me…

Take what resonates. Leave space for what has not revealed itself yet.

Come sit with me. You belong here.